

ROYAL AERONAUTICAL SOCIETY

HUMAN FACTORS GROUP

Helen Muir Award

The Helen Muir Award is presented to Human Factors practitioners by the Human Factors Group of the Royal Aeronautical Society in memory of Professor Helen Muir, a groundbreaking scientist and inspiring teacher responsible more than anyone else for the international leading role of aviation human factors in the United Kingdom.

Recipients are nominated by conference delegates and members-at-large of the Human Factors Group. The Award promotes outstanding work by practitioners in the field, recognizing dedication, skill and valuable contributions to the industry by trainers, developers, scientists and managers who motivate, inspire and enable.

The 2012 Helen Muir Award is presented to

Capt. George Robertson

October 30th, 2012